ELA – Reading (5points each)

In the summer of 1997, a disaster struck Indonesia. The disaster was a series of fires that sent huge clouds of smoke rising into the air. The fires spread across a huge area. Thousands of acres were destroyed by flame. But it wasn't the flames that caused the most serious problems. It was the smoke. The smoke was so thick that it made people sick, even people hundreds of miles away.

The smoke swept over Indonesia. Then it spread to other countries. In Singapore and Malaysia, cities were choked by a thick layer of hazy smog. Millions of people suffered from the air pollution.

The thick smoke also caused accidents. Drivers could barely see the roads through their windshields. One airplane crashed in the haze. Two ships ran into each other in the sea. In November, rains came and put out the raging fires. By that time, tremendous damage had been done.
