ELA – Reading (5 points each.)

Wilt Chamberlain was once basketball's greatest superstar. He played in the 1960s and 1970s. During his career, he had many excellent games. One game, however, stands out above the rest. That was the night he scored 100 points.

Why was the 100-point game so amazing? On most nights, it's not easy for a team to score that many points, let alone a player. Yet on March 2, 1962, Wilt did it all by himself. Wilt's team was called the Philadelphia Warriors. The Warriors were playing against the New York Knicks. From the very beginning of the game, the Warriors gave the ball to Wilt. Almost every time they did so, Wilt managed to score. By halftime, Wilt had 41 points. After three quarters, he had 69 points. The fans went crazy as the game came to an end. Wilt had scored a record 100 points. This was the first time that it happened. It's never happened again.
