A feature of many modern houses is the Palladian window. This window, with its three panels and curved top, takes its name from the architect Andrea Palladio. He lived in the sixteenth century in Italy. That was an excellent time for talented people. Palladio studied the architecture of the ancient Romans. No one could build like the Romans.

During his lifetime, Palladio designed villas, churches, and other public buildings. Visitors to Italy can still see many of these buildings today.
